Smartphone control

Low energy use (2p per hour)

Using a dedicated app, you can control this well-priced purifier from your smartphone. That means that if you suffer from allergies or asthma, you can remotely instruct it to purify the air ready for when you come home, without having it to be on all day.

It's also extremely sensitive, thanks largely to its laser powered particle sensor. "That means you get a really accurate reading of the air quality in your home," says Nick Kandola of Aircon Centre. And, thanks to an energy efficient DC motor, it's really quiet too.
